

Darling the Curly Tailed Reindoe

Written by Cheryl Campbell
Illustrated by Steve McGinnis

Darling didn't have antlers like her father, uncles, and brothers who were reindeer or even like her mother and the other reindoes. She was still too young. But Darling did have beautiful big eyes and long lashes that swept down her cheeks.

A whimsical illustration of a winter night. In the background, a snow-covered house with a red roof and a chimney is lit up, with a red and white striped chimney cap. The sky is dark blue with many white stars. In the foreground, two reindeer are standing on a snowy surface. One is a light brown reindeer with a small, curled tail, and the other is a darker brown reindeer with a straight tail. The reindeer are looking towards each other. The scene is framed by snow-covered trees and a large, glowing white shape that looks like a reindeer's tail or a snowdrift.

She also had a very special tail. The other little reindoes had tails that were just like all the other reindeer and reindoes in their little village at the North Pole. But Darling's tail was different . . . it had a curl.

